that world's supplies are much smaller than usual, and that there will be sufficient demand for the new crop, both raw and manufactured, to keep prices from going much below where they now are. It is noted that the export sales of the week, in addition to about 300,000 bushles of winter wheat, include about 500,000 bushles of winter wheat, include about 500,000 bushles of the macket has been feverish at times, unfavorable weather conditions having at times counteracted the effects of a rather slack cash demand and comparatively small interior receipts. Stocks increased only 634,000 bushles for the same week last year of 2,263,000 bushles for the same week last year of 2,263,000 bushles, is 1,700,000 smaller than a year ago. This is reflected in prices, which, while tending downward, are ood bushels, is 1,700,000 smaller than a year ago. This is reflected in prices, which, while tending downward, are still relatively higher than wheat; actually so in some cases in the past. Cheaper offerings of Argentine corn have been a factor in the reduction of prices, and if the impression that supplies of native corn will be about wiped at the factor that year crop becomes avail-

prices, and if the impression that vapplies of native corn will be about wiped out before the new crop becomes available is correct, further importations from Argentina are more than likely.
Onts, while affected to some extent
by the depression in the other grains, have held comparatively steady, unfavorable crop reports being the main sustaining feature. Short selling has not been of so much effect as had been expected, and there has been a fair cash business. Available supplies are only about 100,000 bushels less than a year ago, and the total stock is about 6,000,000 bushels less than at this time last year. It is noted that there has been somewhat free selling of new outs in Illinois and Oklahoma.

has been no more business than was absolutely necessary, buyers refusing to stock up until the full effect of the wheat crop was apparent. Even a shad-ing of prices by the mills failed to stimulate trade, and further cuts may be necessary, as flour people say that the old wheat supplies of the mills are about gone and their replenishment will be in the new crop at much lower prices.

Ups and Downs of Cotton.

Ups and Downs of Cotton.

Prices of cotton futures have shown considerable regularity in their alternations, Monday's raily being lost on Tuesday, with Wednesday showing a recovery, Thursday a recession, Friday an advance and Saturday a decline in the July option, other months scoring a slight gain. It has been a weather market almost entirely, the only other disturbing feature being the question of July notices, and quotations for the of July notices, and quotations for the week showing a net advance of from 20 to 25 points. Through all this the spot market held steady at 13.25c for mid-dling uplands. Some large spot houses were credited with the issuance of nodling uplands. Some large spot houses were credited with the issuance of noticea covering about 70,000 bales and buying them in again, thus retaining control of the contract cotton in this market and remaining in a position to make it uncomfortable for July and August shorts, especially as local prices are below a parity with Southern markets. Spinners have bought sparingly when they have bought at all. They are apparently not disposed to accept present prices as being stable, and many are inclined to believe that the rise in futures since March has been so large as to discount anything bullish in the present situation, even including the weather outlook. The farture of the Claffin house had no effect on the futures market, as it was offset by unfavorable weather reports and had not have alterether unexpected. The govfavorable weather reports and had not been altogether unexpected. The government condition report, due next Wednesday and based on reports up to June 25, will hardly show the true condition of the crop, as there has been some severe hot weather since some of the reports were taken, and a few days more of the heat reported from the eastern and central belt can work a great deal of harm.

It is officially estimated that the territory now invaded by the boll weevil is 296,300 square miles, including 22,800 square miles infested for the first time in 1913. The cotton belt area includes been altogether unexpected. The gov

Cotton goods markets have been duli for two or three days as the result of complications arising from the Claffin failure. Values have remained fairly steady, because few goods were usked for and few were offered. Some large users of duck, especially harvester companies, made inquiries regarding supplies for the near future. Two or three railroads also asked for prices on duck supplies. News was received of the total destruction in the Salem fire of the Naumkeag mill, that made a well known brand of sheets and pillow cases. Those are already scarce for quick delivery, and the products of the burned mill were sold far ahead.

Declines Were General. Increased Brazilian receipts, lower prices both there and in Europe, and fears that with the near approach of the new crop there will be increasing pressure from holders in Brazil, have kept the local coffee market weak and declining, although there have been obcasional slight reactions, mainly specialized the second special control of the second special casional slight reactions, mainly speculative. The spot demand is admittedly disappointing, and the disposition to await developments is too strong to be overcome by any ordinary trade happening. Advices were received from London, giving details of the dissolution of the valorization committee and the forming of an advisory council which will look after the liquidation of coffee now held as collateral against coffee now held as collateral against loans, and the decision not to sell any valorization coffee in 1915.

The country produce markets have been on a declining scale except for atrictly first class goods, and large quantities of low grade butter and eggs have gone into the storage houses, Live stock and dressed meats have made fractional advances, but the general tendency of the spot wholesale markets has been downward, The Tribune's tabulation of twenty-four articles of current consumption for the week showing that while seven advanced in price, nine declined, and eight remained unchanged.

The report urges a comprehensive study of the prison industries, and emphasizes the strong and increasing demand, not only that the prisoners become, if possible, self-supporting, but that they be able to earn something toward the support of their families. It also raises the question whether there should not be a change in the method of administration of the state prisons looking to the reduction of political influence.

The association has given special attention to inspecting the county fails. Many important improvements have been made as a result of its recommendations.

The association carries on relief work with families of prisoners, and provides special dinners on Thanksgiving and Christmas. During the year a special prison visitor was appointed, supplementing the prison visiting of several other members of the staff. The association also has maintained two probation officers in the Court of General Sessions, who investigated 599 cases and had on probation during 1912-1913, 232 persons.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune. Savannah, June 28.—R. O. Suddeth, of Maysville, who after twelve years of spasmodic college life has finished the agricultural course, has received his diploma from the University of Georgia. Suddeth is the possessor of the most remarkable record of any Georgia student or alumnus.

Since entering the university twelve

Georgia student or alumnus.

Since entering the university twelve years ago he has been a student most of the time, but has also served in the navy, mined gold in North Georgia, got married, supported a family, farmed, and, after four years of study following his last entry into college, has acquired an expert knowledge of agriculture.

WORK, TIED TO ROLLER.

Machine Ends Convicts' Hot

Sub-prison several of the obstinate ones chained to a steam roller, which compelled the prisoners to keep walking.

Some of them walked a few hours, then begged to return to their former work, while others stuck it out, but none for the foll day.

FINDS SISTER SUICIDE.

Who Leaped to Death. Israel Boxer, of 1537 Fulton av., The Bronx, visited the Bellevue morgue last night and identified the body of the young woman who Saturday afternoon jumped to her death from the roof of a six story tenement house at Jackson and South sts. as that of his sister, n the Sadie, twenty-three years old, who state lived with her parents at 221 East 98th

He said he had no idea why his sister should have committed suicide. She had no love affair, he said, and had always had good health. She was in good spirits when she left home Saturday and said nothing to her family of any trouble.
